SITUATION SUMMARY

San Mateo Bridge Closure

- Per Caltrans, the San Mateo Bridge will be closed for construction work from 2200 hours on 05/08/15 through 0500 hours on Monday, 05/11/15.
- Additionally, a second closure is scheduled from 2200 hours on Friday, 05/22/15, through 0500 hours on Monday, 05/25/15 (Memorial Day weekend).
- Drivers are being asked to use the Dumbarton, Bay Bridge or Highway 237 as alternate routes. The agency says crews will use the closure to resurface the entire span of the bridge and replace expansion joints. Electrical cables and transformers will also be replaced. The closure could impact travel to several major Bay Area events, including the Bay to Breakers on 05/17/15.
- For more information and updates on the San Mateo-Hayward Bridge project, drivers can visit www.dot.ca.gov/dist4/projects2/sanmateobridge/

Weather of Concern

- No significant Weather Watches or Warnings are in effect.

Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories by County: http://www.wrh.noaa.gov/sto/brief/www_bc_cal.php

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

An upper level low will approach the region today bringing the chance for showers and inland thunderstorms for the next few days. However, even with the low nearby most areas will remain dry.

Medford Weather:

Today a cold front will move ashore bringing highs down to about 5 degrees cooler west of the Cascades. There is also enough instability to warrant a slight chance of thunderstorms along the Cascades and from the Scott Valley to the Trinity Alps and Siskiyou in Northern California. Monday night into Tuesday, a combination of low pressure and cold air aloft with daytime heating will result in more widespread showers. In addition, thunderstorms are forecast east of the Cascades.

Reno Weather:

High pressure over California and Nevada today will give way to low pressure moving into the region Monday and Tuesday. The low will bring cooler temperatures, gusty winds, and chances for showers and thunderstorms north of Interstate 80. A stronger system is possible Thursday and Friday for more showers and thunderstorms.

San Francisco Weather:

A relatively deep marine layer along with moderate onshore flow will continue to result in relatively cool conditions along with widespread night and morning low clouds through Monday. An upper level trough will develop near the West Coast early this week and then persist through the end of the week. This trough will maintain cooler than normal temperatures through the week and produce a slight chance of showers during the second half of the week.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Sacramento Weather:

Dry weather and mostly clear skies will continue through today with above normal temperatures. A weak system will bring a chance of showers and thunderstorms to the northern mountains late tonight into midweek. A second system will bring more widespread chances for precipitation by the end of the work week.

Hanford Weather:

Dry weather and warmer temperatures will return today and into early this week as a ridge of high pressure builds into central California.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

Higher pressure over the area and weaker onshore flow bring a brief warming trend to southwest California today. On Monday, expect below normal temperatures and night through morning low clouds across the coast and a few coastal valleys through late in the week. There is a chance of light showers late Thursday and Friday.

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

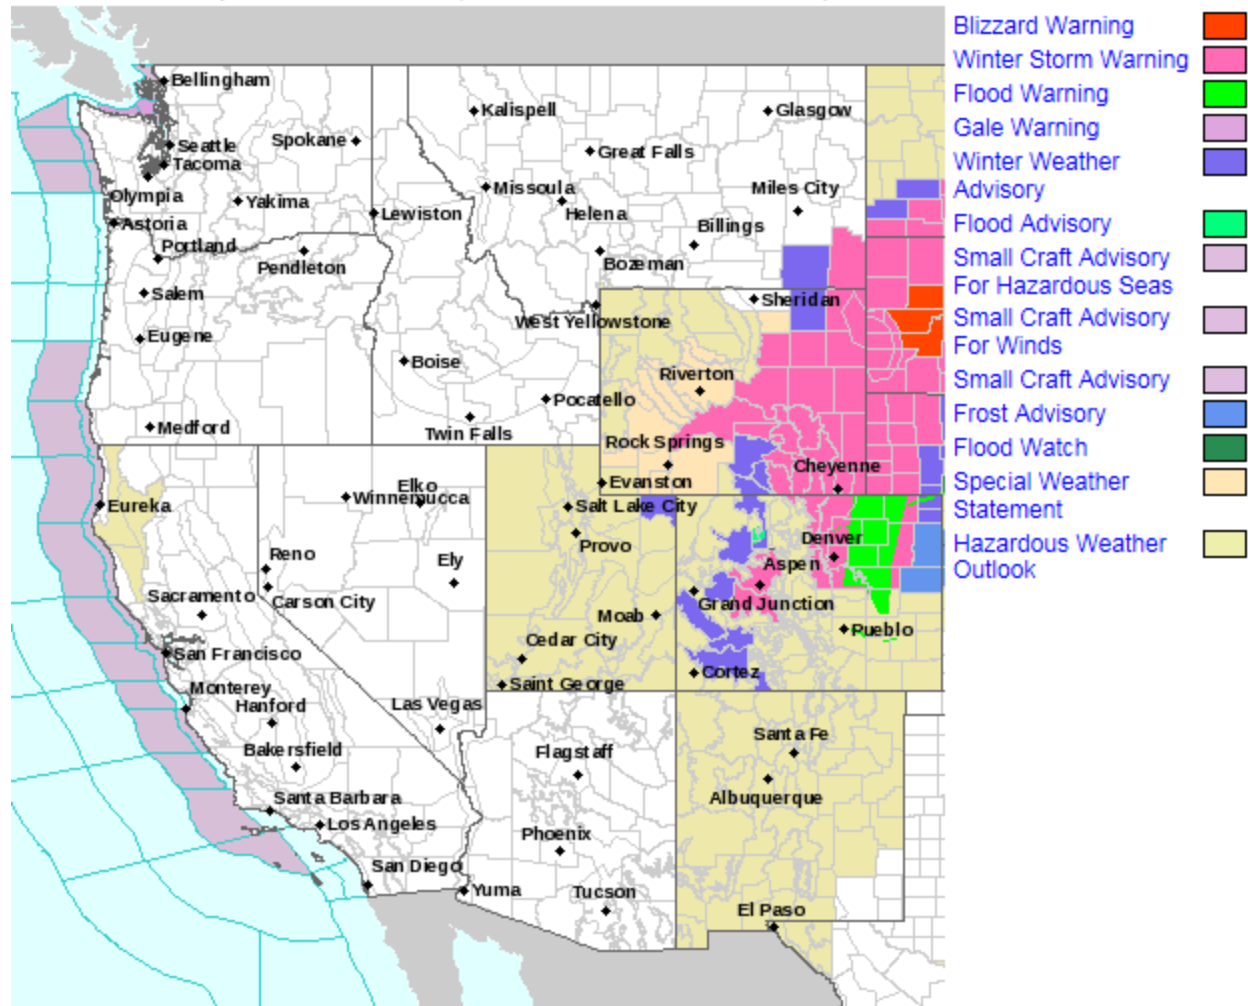

High pressure near the West Coast will bring a warming trend through Monday with patchier night and morning low clouds and fog. A low pressure system moving inland to the north will bring stronger onshore flow for Tuesday and Wednesday with cooling to a little below average, gusty west winds in the mountains and deserts, and night and morning coastal low clouds and fog spreading farther into the valleys. For late Thursday through early Saturday, a low pressure system will move inland through Southern California bringing cooling, gusty west winds in the mountains and deserts, and periods of showers, most likely Thursday night into Friday.

Southeast California Weather:

A low pressure system in the plains will continue to bring below normal temperatures to the Desert Southwest today. High pressure will then allow temperatures to return to normal values by early next week, although mid to late week troughing across the Pacific Northwest should prevent temperatures from climbing into the triple digits. There will also be an increasing chance of precipitation late in the week as a trough approaches the area.
